

New Safe Treatment Makes Spent Fuel Unusable For Weapons

- The new L Experimental Facility will convert highly enriched uranium found in spent fuel into a form no longer usable in nuclear weapons.
- The fuel is melted and mixed with depleted uranium rendering it safe for storage in a national repository.
- Once this demonstration facility verifies the value of this innovative process, a full-scale production facility will be constructed.

L Experimental Facility (LEF).